

ABSTRACT

A two-step combustion system configured to install an auxiliary combustion chamber at the upper lateral surface of the combustion chamber and to store some of the compressed fuel-air mixture in the auxiliary combustion chamber to allow the fuel-air
5 mixture to be burnt again after the middle of an explosion stroke, thereby reducing the fluctuation range of the rotational force of a crankshaft.